

HP Education Services Race to Results Project Management Simulation

HP's unique Race to Results Project Management Simulation provides an exciting and practical environment to learn key portfolio, program and project management principles. From executives to project team members, participants obtain breakthrough understanding of how project management maximizes bottom line enterprise results.

Every second counts in today's competitive markets. Winning is dependent, in part, upon successfully implementing your IT projects. Project management is one of the top-most sought skills by CIOs today. Most IT projects fail due to insufficient professional project management. One study indicated that without well-trained project managers, "56% of projects saw cost overruns of more than 50%, and 84% had time overruns."

This comprehensive, multiple project simulation is an exciting high energy team activity that clearly illustrates the business benefits of project management. The simulation demonstrates the application of project management principles in the context of a live production environment. Projects are managed across

Business, Operations and Development areas mirroring real life constraints of time, cost and quality to provide an unparalleled learning experience. This experiential learning, facilitated by the world of motor racing, leads to breakthrough understanding of how multiple projects must be orchestrated to maximize bottom line results.

Features and Benefits

HP's Race to Results Project Management Simulation is an effective way for your organization to experience successfully applying project management principles and techniques while facing real-life constraints. Each participant will obtain:

- An enhanced appreciation of all areas of responsibility including Business, Operations and Development.
- An improved understanding of key PM Techniques and Tools.
- The opportunity to apply methodologies and behavioral changes to a realistic software development cycle in a low risk environment.
- An accelerated understanding of the project management big picture.
